Now It Can Be Told! . . . PARLIAMENT WAS TO 'TAKE TO THE HILLS'

(Editor's Note: This is one in a series of "Now It Can Be Told" stories—articles which now can reveal facts formerly cloaked by military and security censorship.)

By Thomas C. Watson
(U. S. Staff Correspondent)
LONDON, June 30—(INS)—Perhaps the best kept secret of the whole war was the destination of the House of Parliament and the Government itself, had Goering intended to blast Berlin. It can now be told that Parliament would have moved to the Malvern Hills, in the West Country.

Parliament would have functioned in a fashionable boys' college at Malvern, with the rest of the Government departments scattered among the many fine old country residences.

As the Parliamentary correspondent of the International News Service, the writer was let into a few of the secrets during the fatal days between the German rape of Prague and the actual outbreak of war with Germany.

There were two schemes, "A" and "B." Every member of Parliament, parliamentary officials and the odd newspaper men accredited to Parliament received these secret orders. They told no one, the writer did not even tell his wife.

Railway vouchers were issued, along with a mysterious baggage label. We were allowed only one and bag and the instructions told us where our journey would end, not where it would end. The arrangements, however, were unbreakable. Daily the correspondents paid a visit to "Room 15" where the secret was kept. When the House was not sitting the local post office was to be the source of information.

In the solitary "suitecase" there was packed food supplies for at least three days. That had to be carried personally. Then there was another trunk for clothing which had to be dispatched by another route.

Kume Provides Yanks With New Land Mass For Air Bases

By Gerard R. Himmelsbach
(U. S. Pacific Cable Editor)
Japanese quarters hinted today at the imminence of two new American invasions—one of Balikpapan on Eastern Borneo, and the other of a stepping-stone island north of conquered Okinawa.

Shortly after Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz's headquarters revealed officially that American troops were expanding their hold on the heart of the Ryukyu chain by occupying Kume Island, Tokyo broadcasts told of naval action around Okinawa Island.

Kume lies some 50 miles to the west of Okinawa, and was occupied by forces under Nimitz's command several days ago. Triangular in shape and three by seven miles in extent, it provides the Yanks with new land mass for air bases and as a buffer to the west of Okinawa's vital installations.

Nimitz said that Kume was occupied without opposition, patrols over-running the entire island without encountering enemy resistance.

Okinawa is situated approximately 40 miles to the north of Okinawa. According to the enemy reports, a force of American destroyers and minesweepers sortied up to its coast to reconnoitre defenses.

The enemy report, if substantiated, might indicate that another island on the road to Japan was about to feel the tread of determined American boots. Japanese broadcasts have lately been insisting that islands in that general area would be invaded as the Yanks sought to gain new stepping-stones nearer the enemy homeland.

MacArthur's airmen dropped 162 tons of bombs in support of the ground forces in the Philippines. In addition, they sank a freighter-transport and eight luggers and damaged a Jap mine-layer in Formosa Strait.

On the Asiatic mainland, two Chinese columns battled toward a junction inside Linchow after recapturing the airfield to the south of the city. The airbase 400 miles southeast of Chungking formerly was a base for strikes against the Jap home islands.

One dispatch said that Linchow city already had been completely reoccupied by the Chinese, while other Chungking forces closed in on another former U. S. airfield at Kweilin. This city is 100 miles northeast of Linchow.

Japanese forces continued to retreat along the Chokiang "invasion coast." They were falling back toward Ninghai, 35 miles south of Hangchow Bay, and were being harassed by Chinese guerrillas and regular troops.

The enemy retreat left almost 200 miles of coastline exposed to possible Allied invasion. This strip of shore is some 400 miles west of American-held Okinawa.

Thieves Kill Heifer In Field; Leave Hide

DURHAM, June 30—Thieves, evidently expert butchers, killed a one-year-old heifer in a pasture in Durham township, and carried off the carcass, leaving nothing behind but the hide, head, feet and innards.

Montford Nicholas, who operates a farm on the Durham-Harrow road one mile south of here, reported the theft to State Police after he had found the remains of the 500-pound animal in an isolated section of the pasture.

He reported to police that he last saw the heifer on June 26, and did not miss it until Thursday when he was checking his herd, pastured in a rambling meadow on the farm.

The fact that the thieves selected the heifer for their prey and then led it to the isolated spot for the slaughter indicated, police said, that they knew what they wanted and had surveyed the locale before acting.

The expert way in which the animal had been skinned also led police to believe that it was done by a practiced hand.

The meadow, part of which parallels the road, is enclosed by a barbed wire fence.

Believe Leopold Has Abandoned Hope for Throne

Brussels—Informed observers in Brussels today voiced the opinion that King Leopold III has realized his abdication is the only solution for the political crisis in Belgium.

There is a growing belief in the Belgian capital that the monarch has abandoned any hopes of returning to his throne and that he now is seeking the most graceful exit possible.

It is believed the King is anxious to get permission to return home to bid a formal farewell to his people.

Meanwhile endless consultations continued in Salzburg where Leopold recovered from the illness he contracted while a prisoner of the Nazis. Paul Van Zeeland, former premier and a leader in the moderate Catholic Party, hopes to fly to Salzburg from Brussels today.

Communist, Socialist and Liberal leaders renewed their threats of a general strike if Leopold attempts to return to Brussels or even form a cabinet while he remains in Salzburg.

Indian Political Groups Asked to Submit Lists

Simla—Indian political groups were invited today to submit lists of nominees to serve on the proposed all-Indian Executive Council under Viceroy Lord Wavell.

Wavell asked that the nominations be returned by next Friday, eight days before resumption of the Simla conference which adjourned yesterday after delegates were unable to agree on distribution of seats on the proposed governing body.

President Mohammed Ali Jinnah of the Moslem League was expected to ask the League's working committee on Friday to support his contention that Moslem members of the council be nominated only by the League. Jinnah said that the plan for caste representation would enable Congress Hindu Party to command a majority.

LABOR UNREST

Since the Federal government took over the control of labor relations, the number and extent of strikes has been a yardstick of how satisfied the industrial areas of the United States are with the National Administration. Recent figures of the Labor Department therefore shed an interesting light on public reaction to our new President.

These figures are for May—the first full month of the Truman Administration.

There were more strikes that month, according to the Labor Department, than in any other May since the war began.

A total of 310,000 workers were involved, and the loss of time was more than two million man-days—fifty per cent higher than in the preceding month, or in the same month a year ago.

These statistics weaken the belief expressed by many casual observers—that the Truman administration is to be less union-partisan than his predecessor; and that the irritations which the bureaucrats have caused on both sides of the labor-management fence are being lessened.

Behind all of these strikes are the goading of the alphabetical agencies.

The major strike of the period was the hard coal walk-out called by John L. Lewis to try to crack the Little Steel Formula.

The miners got a substantial increase in their pay, the price of coal has been raised—but the bureaucrats are just as noisy as ever trying to boast that they have "held the line against inflation."

The inconsistencies and the annoyances of the Federal "directives" continues unabated.

Just as it is totally impossible, under the laws and the rules, for an industry or a plant really to protect itself against jurisdictional fights between unions, so it appears to be impossible to abide by the letter of the regulations.

While bureaucracy was going through the novel act

The 1574 pupils in Bristol public schools during the term just ended had a sales total of $53,809.35 in war stamps and bonds.

Not only were the students active in stamp and bond sales, but also aided the war effort in waste paper collection. Junior Red Cross work, clothing collections, and Salvation Army drive.

The total stamp sales was $13,510.80 (not including converted bonds); total bond sales, $40,298.55; total sales, $53,809.35.

Bath, Wood, Jefferson and Harrison elementary schools were entitled to fly the "Schools at War Flag." Twenty-five elementary classrooms maintained a yearly average of 90% or better for purchase of stamps or bonds. The above total does not represent the sale of corporation bonds made by students. This sale brings the total to about $94,000 for the district schools.

In special campaign bond drives there were "purchased" through student sales: 16 machine guns, 1 potato peeler, 2 ambulances, 7 flame throwers, 1 aerial camera, 1 parachute cargo, 1 blockbuster bomb, 6 "walkie-talkie,"

HOPE DEFERRED

Announcement of the start of production of automobiles for civilian use seems to have raised hopes a bit too high for the general good of national transportation. With the opportunity to buy a new car only a bare possibility, some owners have taken the position it is foolish to spend money for repairs when a new machine will soon be in the garage.

National Automobile Dealers' Association is the first to sound a warning. Officials of that organization say there is a discernible tendency to neglect repairs and service. They say this might bring about a breakdown in national transportation. They ascribe this development to a lack of public understanding on the subject of new cars.

These are the facts, as the car dealers' organization sees them: Approximately 24,000,000 overage cars remain in service. The number of new cars to come off the assembly lines during the first year—July 1, 1945, to July 1, 1946—cannot be determined definitely, but it will be far from ample to meet the most urgent demands. More cars will be scrapped in the next year than will be produced. Chance of the average car owner to get a new car in the next year is about a 100-to-1 shot.

MONEY TO BURN

The amount of money in circulation—that is, exclusive of what is held by the Treasury and the banks—reached the stupendous total of $26,548,000,000 or $191 per capita on last May 31. At the height of the so-called prosperity of 1929, the figure was only $47,746,000,000 or $39 per capita. In 1944 it was $163 per capita, in 1943 $128, in 1941 $72.
Approximately 85 per cent of the money in circulation is represented by Federal Reserve notes. These are issued by the twelve Federal Reserve banks to commercial banks when the latter call for them. A commercial bank calls for more Federal Reserve notes when necessary to meet the currency demands of its depositors. The stupendous amount of money in circulation represents a demand for it by the public.

More currency is needed primarily because of the much higher volume of business transactions during the wartime economic activity. All other industrial nations have shown increases in circulation of currency.

Another cause for the expansion of currency in circulation is a wartime change in personal habits. Many persons are receiving high wages who did not have a bank account before the war, and who do not have one now. Some persons who had bank accounts have shifted to new localities in which they have not opened bank accounts. All over the country "currency exchanges" have arisen which cash checks for a fee for persons who might have difficulty getting checks cashed at banks.

Most persons are carrying more cash on their persons than previously, as is shown when personal robberies are reported.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

Dangerous Combination

Washington, June 30. PRACTICALLY everybody in the country capable of any kind of thought (except the Communists, whose business is to promote economic chaos here) is against inflation. It is so unanimous that many who have slight idea of what the word means inveigh against it.

WE ARE warned of inflation by the leaders of both parties and the leaders of the opposed factions in both parties. The professional liberals, the labor bosses, the advanced New Deal dreamers of the Wallace type, all profess to be as aware of the general danger as the Conservatives. They concede inflation to be a great national menace and claim to be as anxious to avert it as anyone. Certainly they sound sincere enough when they talk on the subject. The curious thing, however, is that their acts more or less contradict their words. They point with alarm toward the threat and then deliberately move toward it.

FOR EXAMPLE, every economist considers that the most vital of our postwar problems is to regain some kind of control over the Federal budget. Unless that is achieved, the other steps we intend to take and the prosperity envisaged by the economic authorities will all be washed out in an uncontrollable upsurge of prices, wages and rents; the end of which is the reduction of nearly everyone (except the vastly rich who can always find means to take care of themselves) to the level of utter poverty. Uncontrolled inflation means the wiping out of everyone save a fortunate few. Next to defeat in war it is the worst disaster.

DURING the war there can be no control over the Federal finances. A restraint has to be abandoned. We go to the limit, as is right. But, with a national debt now beyond the 300 billion mark, the stern necessity to recover financial stability as quickly as possible is too clear to argue. That is basic. Yet, important men in Congress and out, who agree entirely about this, are sponsoring or supporting measures which, if enacted, would throw wide open the Treasury spigots and render anything like fiscal equilibrium utterly impossible. There are proposals now pending in Congress and about to be presented there which call for the expenditure of billions of dollars on new projects, wholly aside from the billions proposed for care and compensation of the returning veterans. Nearly every Government agency has planned for expansion rather than contraction.

IT IS the most dangerous possible combination. It is the exact reverse of the Truman policy for 1946, which is to make no reduction in taxes for the first year following the war but to institute large economies throughout the entire governmental machine. In that way—and that way only—can the Government keep on top of its fiscal problem, avoid being drowned by the spenders. After the first year a gradual reduction each year for a ten-year program is planned. But the important point is—no reduction for the first year. If that plan is followed, the Government not only could protect every holder of a Government bond but could begin the essential reduction of the huge debt. However, it will take all the weight Mr. Truman can swing to head us in that direction, and he needs all the help he can get. There, of course, is no way to avoid it, but this domestic condition is so fraught with peril that it seems a pity so much of his time and energy must be devoted to foreign affairs.

LABOR UNREST

of upholding Little Steel and fixed prices with one hand, and raising coal wages and price on the other, another set of bureaucrats was preparing a series of penalties for concerns which guessed wrong at a time when no one really knew what the Little Steel formula really provided.

These decisions have since been announced. Firms in this part of the United States penalized a total of $1,500,000 in their income tax returns for "over-payments" to working people during varying periods running back to 1942.

The union members themselves doubtless feel unhappy over the fact that their employers, after this long interval, are suddenly being punished for over-generosity in trying to meet the wage-scale formula.

But there is nothing they can do about it. And this is true in many other matters.

Management has long been at a heavy disadvantage, under the Wagner Act, in all labor disputes. The recent Supreme Court decisions, which were viewed by Columnist Paul Mallon as tending to "make the country over into a union autocracy," greatly increasing the power of certain types of labor racketeers.

Petrillo, busy raking in the shekels as a result of his victory in setting up his own special tax-system on phonograph records, is typical of the extent to which shrewd and tough labor bosses can turn the Federal statutes to their own special advantage, at the expense of management, working men and women, and the public.

The right of states to regulate unions—for example, to force out known felons, convicts and gangsters—has been crippled.

Little attention is being paid to statutes requiring unions to make a public accounting of moneys they collect. Last year's PAC campaign made a joke of the laws which attempted to put a ceiling on the use of union funds in politics.

Aside from appointing a new Secretary of Labor—a man definitely tied with neither AFL or CIO—President Truman had done nothing to solve the tangled labor front.

Simplification of the network of agencies having to do with labor matters, and restoring some just balance between the rights of management and of labor when they come to the government for "mediation," have not gone beyond the conversational stage.

The President has not lifted a finger to help the Ball-Burton-Hatch labor bill, recently dropped into the Senate to shakeup the entire labor-relations branch of the government.

This bill, it now appears, is slated for slow death at the hands of the union bosses, though it would correct a long list of improprieties now existing. In fact, while the bill is not perfect, it is the most well-reasoned plan for putting the spirit of fair play into labor relations yet submitted.

Its fate, and Truman's attitude toward it, are well worth watching.
